

READERS' FAVOURITE GAY BOOKS (updated 2012)

Here it is – our newest update! Thank you for submitting your recommendations for the Readers' Favourite Gay Books 2012 which are combined with the original 118 books. This time Wren Boudreau was not available to help out and no one volunteered to compile the revised list so I did the initial cut and Lynn worked her technology magic afterwards with Excel. Christian also got into the act by ensuring that I didn't screw everything up. :) I love getting him excited when I mess with stuff. :) We grouped series books together wherever possible, so although the list is 550+ books there are probably another 200 or more if you count series books individually.

We have maintained the same categorization system to make it easy to sort the books and I hope that this list will continue to be an excellent reference source for you.

Like last time around, all paranormal and fantasy books have been grouped under Speculative Fiction, which should now be familiar to you. A few books on the list are extremely violent and some have no HEAs so buyer beware and check the reviews! If there are any names misspelled or other errors, please leave a comment on the post. I'm sorry but no additions are permitted at this time.

Many of the books on the list have withstood the test of time and have been around as readers' favourites for 25 or more years (Angels in America by Tony Kushner, The Dreyfus Affair by Peter Lefcourt, The Front Runner by Patricia Nell Warren, Dream Boy by Jim Grimsley are excellent examples). Recent favourites include the PsyCop series by Jordan Castillo Price, Almost Like Being in Love by Steve Kluger, the Adrien English Mysteries by Josh Lanyon, The Coda series by Marie Sexton, the Cut & Run series by Madeleine Urban and Abigail Roux, and The Draegan Lords series by M.L. Rhodes, to name just a few. Enjoy and happy shopping. :)
